

SHOULD THE E.U. REVIEW ITS STRATEGIC DEFENCE RÔLE?

Gonzague Devillard

The background of the slide features a dark blue, textured surface with the yellow stars of the European Union flag. A black silhouette of a soldier in a helmet, holding a rifle, is positioned on the left side. A solid orange horizontal bar is located in the top left corner.

SUMMARY

---

- I. The European Union's defence strategie
- II. The risks that threat the European defence strategie

I. The European Union's defence strategie

- A very low common budget
- A very low common organisation
- A very low volonte form the states
- But a goal: having an autonomy for the European Union's defence

Alliance between states

- European countries organize their own alliance and training
  - To develop their skills
  - To learn how to work together

Exception

- UK has to choose in which alliance it wants be: the EU's one or the US's one.
- UK:
  - one of the biggest european army
  - one of the biggest european arms industry

II. The risks that threaten the European defence strategie

- More and more different threats
- New threats: ukrainian conflit
- Limits of this european defence: ukrain

Some threats

- To sum up there are threats that could be a problem for the European Union's defence strategy
  - The Brexit
  - The Ukraine war
  - The willingness of some countries to leave European Union
  - The weak importance and respect of this undersized organization

To conclude

- The European Union's defence strategie would need to be reorganize
- The European Union's defence is undersized
- The European Union's defence has to innovate
- The European Union has to motivate states to be active members of this defence strategie

Thank you for listening
